The first 'railway' in Britain had been constructed by Sir Francis Willoughby in 1605, as a pit head track built at Wollaton, in Nottinghamshire. However, the first steam powered railway locomotive was built in 1804 by Richard Trevithick, born on April 13th, 1771 and his revolutionary creation proved able to haul 70 people and 10 tons of iron at five m.p.h.

Oswald Stevens Nock was a highly prolific author: his output was exceedingly variable in quality and his most obvious lack (highly evident in his "autobiographies") is that of self-criticism. Biddle contributed a biography on him to the Oxford Companion to British Railway History. He notes that he lived from 1904 to 1994 and worked for Westinghouse. He claims that Nock's knowledge was ...
