Typological Studies Word Order And

In linguistics, word order typology is the study of the order of the syntactic constituents of a language, and how different languages employ different orders. Correlations between orders found in different syntactic sub-domains are also of interest. The primary word orders that are of interest are the constituent order of a clause, namely the relative order of subject, object, and verb;

[A] acrostic Series of lines or verses whose first letters form a word, the alphabet, or some other pattern. Psalm 25 is an example. If you you look at it in a Hebrew Bible, you can see that the first word of each successive line (which mostly match the verses) begins with the next letter of the Hebrew alphabet: aleph, bet, gimel, etc. Click here to see Psalm 25 in a Hebrew Bible.

In linguistics, nominalization or nominalisation is the use of a word which is not a noun (e.g., a verb, an adjective or an adverb) as a noun, or as the head of a noun phrase, with or without morphological transformation. The term refers, for instance, to the process of producing a noun from another part of speech by adding a derivational affix (e.g., the noun legalization from the verb legalize).

Syntax, the arrangement of words in sentences, clauses, and phrases, and the study of the formation of sentences and the relationship of their component parts. In a language such as English, the main device for showing the relationship among words is word order; e.g., in "The girl loves the boy," the subject is in initial position, and the object follows the verb.

INTRODUCTION. 1. "The word of the lord abides for ever." This word is the Gospel which was preached to you" (1 Pet 1:25; cf. Is 40:8). With this assertion from the First Letter of Saint Peter, which takes up the words of the Prophet Isaiah, we find ourselves before the mystery of God, who has made himself known through the gift of his word.
