This week, science confirmed what all parents (and all people who have parents) already know -- paying attention to your kids matters. And dads need to be just as attentive and loving as moms if they want to grow healthy, well-adjusted adults. When it comes to fathers with daughters, there are unique challenges associated with this endeavor.

The impact of fatherhood is not subjective, but an objective and documented phenomenon. Although motherhood has dominated the study of parenting in the past, researchers are learning more about how to be a good dad and why that matters every day. So far, they know that kids who grow up with present, engaged dad are less likely to drop out of school or wind up in jail, compared to children with ...
